

The Hometown Connections Advantage

Taking the risk out of business operations

Hometown Connections is addressing a growing need in the public power sector—helping community-owned utilities, their joint action agencies, and their city departments reduce risk through the improvement of their business operations.

No business is immune to operational risk

Inefficient and ineffective foundational business practices make organizations vulnerable to significant operational, financial, security, and reputational risks.

Better business operations reduce costs, boost employee morale, and improve service delivery.

Through our Business Risk Consortium, Hometown Connections personnel and vendor partners bring clarity to a wide array of operational issues.

We take a comprehensive approach to risk across the business

Together, we:

- Identify gaps, redundancies, and collaboration opportunities across the organization or in specific departments
- Identify risks in areas such as regulatory compliance, safety, security, finance, human resources, customer service, power supply, and distribution system operations
- Identify technology management, maintenance, and integration gaps
